BRONXITES SUPPORT THEIR NEIGHBORS

Dozens of Bronx volunteers open their hearts to other boroughs severely damaged by Superstorm Sandy. Many stopped by the Silver Beach Community Center on Sunday, November 4, sorting toiletries, bottled water, and other items bound for Staten Island. The event was organized by Councilman Jimmy Vacca, getting assistance from U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand and Congressman Joe Crowley. More storm coverage starting on page 3.

Bronxites continued the ongoing cleanup phase following Hurricane Sandy after long days - and nights - of no electricity and nervous eyes on their car's gas gauge.

The storm tore into homes, displacing thousands and leaving many residents still in the dark.

As of Tuesday afternoon, about 5,400 Con Edison customers were powerless, down from a high of around 61,000 after Sandy finished doing her worst after sweeping through Tuesday morning, Oct. 29.

Faced with worse power outages in heavily battered Staten Island and Queens, Con Ed said late Monday that remaining Bronx outages could extend into the weekend.

Those without power can go to one of forty warming centers throughout the Bronx from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For locations, as well as other emergency information, go to nyc.gov on the web.

Gas Shortages

And with electricity problems, came gas problems after power was knocked out to pumps at gas stations across the borough and city.

Where deliveries were even possible, lines of cars stretched for blocks, with several hours wait, while drivers on foot with gas cans had similar long waits at the pump.

"My wife Hurricane Sandy left me stranded without gas," joked

Hurricane help here

BY PATRICK ROCCHIO

Bronxites suffering from the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy needn't go through it alone. Many public and private agencies and elected officials are working to help.

Federal Disaster Relief

The Federal Emergency Management Agency has opened a mobile assistance center at Edgewater Park's volunteer firehouse, open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. for at least two weeks.

Homeowners must first call FEMA to register for assistance before visiting the mobile assistance center. Officials from the Small Business Administration are also on-site. To apply for assistance, visit www.DisasterAssistance.gov or call (800) 462-7585.

FEMA was also preparing to open offices in the rotunda of the Bronx County Building on the Grand Concourse and 161st Street to handle claims from homeowners, residents and businesses and provide help from the city and state governments.

Part of FEMA's mission includes running the National Flood Insurance Relief program, which can provide grants of up to $30,000 to homeowners and businesses that do not have flood insurance or who have exhausted their flood insurance coverage.

The hotline for help from the Red Cross is (877) 733-2767.

New York State Homeland Security and Emergency Services, which helps in recovery from natural disasters as well as other emergencies, has established a Sandy Helpline at (888) 769-7243 or (518) 485-1159

Power Outages

As of Monday, Nov. 5 roughly 6,100 Bronx customers were still experiencing power outages, largely in Morris Park and Allerton, as well as Throggs Neck, Country Club and Spencer Estate, City Island and Clason Point, as well as scattered outages in the southwest Bronx.

Customers can report downed power lines, outages, and check service restoration status by computer or mobile device at www.coned.com. They also can call 1-800-75-CONED (1-800-752-6633). It is helpful if they have their Con Edison account number available, and report whether their neighbors also have lost power. Customers who report outages will be called by Con Edison with their estimated restoration times as they become available.

Fallen Trees

Residents can call 311 for fallen trees. If phone call wait times are long, you can log in online www.nyc.gov/apps/311.

Warming Centers

For a list of city warming centers open around the borough daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., go to nyc.gov.

Transportation

As of Monday, Nov. 5, most of the major subway and bus lines were back in service, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was still busy removing water and debris from some tunnels.

It's a Hurricane Sandy chowline at the New York Post's Port Morris printing plant, where the Times Reporter is published. News Corporation, which owns the plant and the publications, fed the troops and offered cots and showers for those stranded by the storm. Anthony Guerriero and Manny Ciulla dish out grub to (l-r) Al Santamaria, Mike Myers, Bobby Mathai and Terry Connolly.

BP Updates

Borough President Ruben Diaz Jr. said his office is relaying information about cleanup and relief efforts from the storm on Facebook (facebook.com/bronxbp) and Twitter on the handle @rubendiazjr.

Small Business Assistance

The city Department of Small Business Services and the city Economic Development Corp. is coordinating services to assist small businesses recovering from Hurricane Sandy.

For small to medium-sized businesses, loans will be patterned after similar programs deployed in past emergencies and capped at $10,000 for those businesses experiencing a storm related interruption in services.

For mid- to large-sized businesses, an emergency sales tax letter from the city Industrial Development Agency will be available allowing them to avoid payment of city and state sales taxes on materials needed to rebuild.

For any business temporarily displaced from its space, the city Economic Development Administration has about 40,000 square-feet of warehouse space at the Brooklyn Army Terminal for short-term "swing-space" for businesses. Call 311 and ask for NYC Business Solutions.

get-togethers - always surrounded by your big, loving family. After your time spent in the army (a Korean War veteran) you met and married the love of your life, had three amazing children and two beautiful grandchildren. You've always been a great husband, father and grandfather. Your family wants you to know how very much you're loved at this special time and always. We love you and Happy Birthday!

Birth

Amber L. Ortiz and Joshua Stephens are the proud parents of Samia Ruth Stephens, born Saturday, October 27. Samia came to this world weighing in at a healthy 6lbs. 5oz. Welcome to the Bronx Samia. Congratulations mom and dad.

Wedding

Bronx-bred local Lizamarie A. Campoamor married Deno J. Hondros on October 21, in a traditional ceremony at Sts. Constantine & Helen Greek Orthodox Church in Fayetteville, NC.

Lizamarie is the daughter of Lydia B. Campoamor of the Bronx. The groom is the son of James and Elaine Hondros of Fayetteville, NC. Congratulations to the bride and groom.

Professional Accolades

I am a very proud grandmother to Alicia Arsena. Alicia is the daughter of my late son Joseph. Her mother Denise and I are overjoyed in reading her name etched on the dentist's office where Alicia works as a hygienist. Wishing lots of luck, Rose Arsena.

Restaurants hungry for biz after Sandy

Gas shortages keeping customers home

BY DAVID CRUZ

Restaurant customers have become something of a rarity on City island, thanks to Superstorm Sandy.

With gas shortages rocking the borough, City Island restauranteurs have seen a significant drop in business along City Island Avenue.

The Lobster House is back in business, but the clients aren't, said Regina Rodriguez, speaking on behalf of owner Jojo Mandarino.

"There's no gas anymore," said Rodriguez. "That seems to be a major issue because coming to City Island you need a car."

Adding to the eatery's woes was the destruction of Larry the Lobster, the enormous shellhead resting atop the roof. The signage had been something of an iconic image for the nautical neighborhood until Sandy's howling winds sent it crashing into the roof.

"We had to chop him up," noted Rodriguez.

At the Seashore Restaurant & Marina just down the street, manager John Arminio estimated he suffered a 75% drop in business following Sandy and the gas crisis. "It's decimated the business," said Arminio, adding much of his customer base hails from outside the borough, with some spending an hour and a half to get to the cozy spot.

"I'm just hoping the gas shortage will subside," said Arminio.

John Liapis, overseeing the Lobster Box, has seen plenty of empty seats on what are supposed to be busy days.

"Our regulars are not coming," said Liapis, one of 35 participating restaurant's for the borough's Restaurant Week.

He was hoping to see an uptick in traffic, but business has slowed down significantly.

nificantly.

Restaurant Week runs until Nov. 16th, giving foodies a chance to wolf down some mouth-watering meals at discounted prices.

Borough President Ruben Diaz Jr., juggling his ongoing assessment of Sandy and promotion of the event, refused to call Restaurant Week off last week, calling it "good morale" for small-time eateries.

"The businesses have not had any traffic for almost a week or so," said Diaz. "We need to keep things going."

Bronx Ale House and Cozy Cottage will feature a $16.41 prix-fixed menu in honor of Bronx settler Jonas Bronck, who purchased a large portion of borough land in 1641.

Over on Arthur Avenue in the borough's Little Italy, local celebrity chef David Greco, owner of David Greco's Arthur Avenue

Trattoria, jumped on the idea of participating in Restaurant Week.

"Anything for the Bronx I'll do," said the Bronx-bred Greco, who included his popular bowtie pasta with mushroom sauce to his prix-fixed menu.

Greco is one of the more well-known chefs around the city, having been featured on the Food Network's Throwdown with Bobby Flay and Chopped.

"They call me the Italian food expert," said Greco.

The event is sponsored by American Express and the New York State Restaurant Association, along with The Bronx Tourism Council and the Bronx Overall Economic Development Corporation.

Reaching out to help

BY PATRICK ROCCHIO

The borough's businesses are reaching out to hold fund raisers to aid victims of Hurricane Sandy.

International Caterers teamed up with local Bronxites, Gina Pizzano-Cirillo and Pat Gallo to help the victims of Hurricane Sandy.

Donation of cleaning supplies, socks, blankets, baby items, canned food or water were dropped off at the Knights of Columbus at 3243 Ampere Avenue on Monday, Nov. 5, Tuesday, Nov. 6, and Thursday, Nov. 8. On Friday, members of the U.S. Navy based in Virginia came to the Knights of Columbus and International Caterers to pick up the donated goods and will deliver it all to the families in Rockaway, Queens.

Bruckner Bar and Grill will be closed for the next three weeks, and its general manager is interested in the welfare of their servers and kitchen staff. The bar and grill has started a fundraiser online to help the staff while the restaurant prepares to reopen. "I really want to keep my staff," said Joseph Diaz, 40, general manager of Bruckner Bar and Grill. "The servers and kitchen staff are good people and they don't get paid for the time they don't work."

To help, visit www.kapipal.com/f0e03067ff-3945caa0e94a17ce1da619.

Paul DiSilvio, owner of La Casa Grande Tabacco Company at 2344 Arthur Ave. donated cleaning goods, coats, etc. to Superstorm Sandy victims on Staten Island, said Rossville resident Donna Sellitti, who said he husband buys cigars from DiSilvio.

Councilman Jimmy Vacca and Community Board 10 held a collection drive Monday, Nov. 5 to Friday, Nov. 9 for non-perishable items, cleaning supplies, toiletries, garbage bags and wipes that are being donated to Hurricane Sandy victims.

BOROBEAT

by Bob
"KAPPY"
Kappstatter

Unless we had a Swami turban and crystal ball, we were frustratingly stuck with a Tuesday afternoon deadline keeping us from running the local winners in the election - and all the concurrent drama (and tragedy) that went with it.

But do check out the paper's website at bxtimes.com for election coverage, especially from that special election to fill the northeast Bronx city council seat formerly held by soon-to-be prison-bound Councilman Larry Seabrook.

One interesting pre-vote theory had Dem Party-backed Andy King losing, thanks to three other male challengers diluting the vote and swinging it one of two fairly well-known female candidates.

We shall see....
Otherwise, we predict no big local surprise upsets.

BYE BYE SAN JUAN
A lotta electeds from across the borough and city (and a Bronx columnist) had their swim trunks and sunblock all packed and ready to head down to San Juan on Wednesday for the annual Somos El Futuro (We are the Future) winter conference of the State Senate/Assembly Puerto Rican & Hispanic Task Force.

As we wrote last week, and experienced last year, the annual jaunt involves some serious workshops and mucho political schmoozing at the pool and on the beach dayside and casinos nightside.

But, with SuperStorm Sandy, then the nor'easter skedded to blow in Wednesday, task force chair, Brooklyn Assemblyman Felix Ortiz decided it wouldn't look too good with photos of electeds enjoying San Juan sun while their constituents struggled in the freezing dark and on long gas lines back home.

West Bronx Councilman Fernando Cabrero was among the first to cancel out anyway, since he's been immersed in putting together emergency relief supplies at the Kingsbridge Armory.

Ditto Bronx BP Ruben Diaz Jr., busy working to get the borough back on its feet after the storm devastation to homes and businesses.

Dem Party boss and Assemblyman Carl Heastie also cancelled out after surveying the problems in his northeast Bronx district.

Meanwhile, Ortiz said the task force will schedule a conference in New York City next month "to address the devastation brought to our communities."

PRESSING THE FLESH
The Bronx was in the house for Obama - in Florida last weekend.

BP Ruben Diaz Jr. answered the call from CANDIDATE Obama (and built some IOUs?), by hopping down to the Sunshine State last weekend to campaign on his behalf among the large Latino population down there.

Spokesman John DeSio said the BP pressed the flesh and spread the word for the prez by working voters in Kissimmee, Tampa, Winter Park and Orlando. Also joining him, Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa.

THE REV
We HAVE to assume Diaz' dad, state Senator Ruben Diaz Sr., was a good Democrat and voted for President Obama, but he put out a pre-election email blast touting his spending much dinero on different Hispanic radio stations and media outlets to air a commercial asking for the Hispanic community to cast their votes on the Conservative Party line.

Meanwhile, The Rev was on his lower-case conservative horse pre-election, firing off an email endorsing U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand's longshot challenger Wendy Long.

This shouldn't come as a surprise, given his views on same sex marriage, abortion and other traditional issues.

Long had a private meeting with The Rev Aug. 14 while he was recuperating from knee replacement surgery at the Rebekah Rehabilitation Center.

We had to pick ourselves up off the floor from laughing at this one.

Some jokester at Assembly candidate/likely winner Mark Gjonaj's fundraiser Monday night at the F&J Pines said don't count defeated and now jobless Assemblywoman Naomi Rivera out, with her REPORTEDLY thinking about running for her term-limited Council Majority Leader brother Joel's 15th C.D. seat in E. Tremont/Belmont.

MOVING ON
John Doyle, after five years toiling for Senator Jeff Klein - "among the most challenging and rewarding experiences of my life" - taking new employment starting Tuesday, Nov. 13 at the North Bronx Healthcare Network.

The City Island native also leaves with some high praise for Jeff, who "has set an impeccable standard as a public servant and is a statesmen whose future is indeed, very bright."

EQUAL TIME
From Tony Roccamo, City Island via Wakefield, on last week's column:

"I suppose a Bronx paper should have an edge to it, but why does Mr. Kappstatter have to use the word 'beotch', a corruption of 'bitch', to describe Hurricane Sandy? And 'There ain't nothing nowhere else like Bronx Attitude?' That's a triple negative.

"I was born, raised and still live in the Bronx and have been fighting 'da Bronx' moron stereotype all of my life. I still have to defend it to know-nothings all of the time. This kind of writing doesn't help."

BRONX BIRTHDAYS
Nov. 10: Comedian and 30 Rock star Tracy Morgan.

Christopher Rios - aka "Big Punisher."

Nov. 13: Garry Kent Masciarelli (Garry Marshall).

Fire Log

THURS, OCT. 11th, 3:14 a.m. – 1832 Parkview Ave. Fire apparatus was called to a reported early morning residential fire near Willow Lane. The blaze was located on the second floor of a three story private dwelling. Engine crew stretched a hose line right away to the second floor as ladder crews started to conduct a search of the structure. A second hose line was being readied by later arriving engine company crews. At 3:18 a.m. Battalion 20 reported that the fire was on the second floor rear section of the structure. At 3:20 a.m. the fire was darkening down and the chief indicated the situation was "probably will hold". Minutes later the incident was declared under control.

MON, OCT. 15th, 6:21 a.m. – 15 East 184 St. Firefighters arriving at a frame building was greeted with a raging inferno on the upper floor that was threatening to spread to an adjacent building. Tower Ladder 33 positioned their apparatus in front of the burning structure to help contain the spread of the expanding flames. Engine crews stretched a hose line onto the third floor of the burning structure as searches were being conducted. Due to conditions upon arrival a second alarm was sounded by Battalion 19 since the flames were spreading into an exposure. Seven minutes went by before the third alarm was transmitted. A second tower ladder was placed into operation helping to contain the flames from spreading into another structure. Before the flames were contained a third tower ladder was placed into operation. The fire was declared under control shortly after 8 a.m. Red Cross officials assisted 26 persons, as seven fire fighters received medical assistance. One civilian was reported injured, but refused medical aid.

Stormy arrival for this baby

BY KIRSTEN SANCHEZ

Elijah Matthew Zephre had a rather stormy entrance into this world.

Not only born during one of the worst, most devastating storms to hit the tri-state area, he also arrived two months early and weighing only two pounds 11 ounces.

Elijah's mom Audrena Zephre said the birth of her son on Monday, Oct. 29 at Montefiore Medical Center was a big surprise, since he wasn't due until Jan. 8.

"I was at home when I just started having contractions," Zephre said. "We decided to go to the hospital, because we didn't want to get stuck in the house and not be able to get there. At that point it just seemed very windy, and it wasn't too difficult to get a cab."

"He was definitely ready to come," she said.

As her labor continued, Zephre said the weather got worse.

"As I was laying in bed, I could just hear the wind howling," she said. "At one point the wind blew the window open to my room, and the nurse had to call maintenance to come and fix it. I was definitely nervous, nobody knew if we were going to lose power or not and since Elijah is a premie he was definitely going to need power."

"He wanted to make his mark when Sandy was here."

Zephre said Elijah was born at 5:30 a.m. on Monday morning, with no complications and will be able to go home in about two months.

Although some areas of the Bronx were left devastated by Sandy, many Bronx hospitals held up well and even became sanctuaries for patients from other boroughs.

All of Montefiore's hospitals remained with power throughout the storm.

By Friday, Montefiore had taken in 27 patients from Manhattan hospitals suffering power problems: six NICU babies from NYU Langone, one adult from Bellevue Hospital and 20 patients from the New York Downtown Hospital (five mothers and their newborns as well as 10 adults requiring medical and surgical care).

The hospital also served as dorms for as many as 150 staff members who feared they would not be able to get back and forth to work during the storm.

St. Barnabas Hospital in E. Tremont also held up well during the storm.

All senior administrators spent the night Monday, Oct. 29, preparing for the worst, said a spokesperson for the hospital, but there were no problems.

"The generator held up, and next of kin of patients were all called letting them know patients would be well cared for," the spokesperson said. "The hospital also prepared for patients from Coney Island and later, Bellevue, but in neither case did they show up."

Workmen's Circle took in 99 patients from Sea Crest Nursing Home in Coney Island due to the damage of their building.

Staff stayed at the facility from Sunday night until Tuesday, as the hurricane passed.

"We all agreed to help as much as we could and we originally agreed to accept 70 of their residents," said Larry Abrams, director of administration. "As people started to come in, our staff began assessing them, making sure they were prepared for their stay at Workmen's Circle. As the buses continued to unload, we realized that there were more than 70 Silver Crest patients had come in."

Captail Acceleration Plan

Dear editor,

New Yorkers can expect more jobs and better-kept roads, bridges, schools, firehouses, and sewers, thanks to a plan I proposed in February and the City adopted this month.

On Oct. 17, I joined the Mayor and the City Council Speaker at City Hall to announce the implementation of a Capital Acceleration Plan. The plan will hasten the construction of $1 billion of infrastructure improvements, projects that are already in the pipeline but weren't scheduled to start until much later.

By doing these projects now, rather than later, the City will save taxpayers more than $200 million by taking advantage of historically low interest rates. But even better, it will create 8,000 jobs, mostly in the construction industry, where there is plenty of capacity.

Put simply, this plan will deliver a much-needed shot in the arm to our City's economy. First and foremost, it means more jobs for Bronx residents at a time when the borough is experiencing a 13% unemployment rate. In fact, of the 150,000 New Yorkers who work in construction, about 19% live in The Bronx, and too many of these skilled workers are either underemployed or unemployed. Unemployment in the construction industry disproportionately affects minorities. About 40% of New York City construction workers are Latino and 20% are African-American.

It's not just folks who work in construction who will benefit from this great plan. Small businesses in The Bronx can also expect a much needed boost. That's one of the great things about construction projects: The benefits trickle through our local economy, as workers patronize local restaurants, shops, and services – promoting new hiring at those businesses.

As of now, the projects set for accelerated capital funding throughout the City and in The Bronx include:

- $290 million for repairs and upgrades to 100 school buildings
- $85.3 million for rehabilitation of City property, including the City offices at 1932 Arthur Ave.
- $59.8 million to resurface an additional 300 lane-miles of roadway, including $8.4 million for The Bronx
- $37.7 million on street reconstruction, including Boller Avenue and the Grand Concourse
- $19.1 million for vehicular and pedestrian-bridge repair
- $7.2 million for protective coating for two Grand Concourse bridges.

Creating good jobs, accelerating infrastructure improvements, and realizing long-term cost savings are a winning trifecta for our City's taxpayers.

Tough times demand creative solutions, and this plan is a solution that will keep our City moving. It is not an argument to spend more. Rather, we are promoting smart, strategic investments that will help put our economy back on track.

Government is not the only solution to our economic problems, but it must be part of the

MILITARY APPRECIATION DAY AT SUNY MARITIME

Patriotism was alive and well at SUNY Maritime at Fort Schuyler as Military Appreciation Day kicked into high gear on the afternoon of Saturday, October 5. Maritime Cadets joined on-duty servicemen and women for the annual celebration that honors their dedication to the United States Armed Forces. The event happened just as the SUNY Maritime Football players the Privateers hosted the Becker College Hawks.

Don't boycott any stores

Dear Editor,

I do not think residents of Morris Park should boycott any businesses based on a "voluntary" assessment.

There are right and wrong ways of raising money, and this is not the right way.

White Plains Road has a BID that allocates the money for holiday lights, as part of its support for the businesses in that area. It does not depend on the "outrage" of any individuals.

We do not need empty store fronts in our area.

Any action that contributes to the decline of our devoted merchant population would be a blow to the neighborhood. Reduced outlay for decorations or other compromises would be far better.

Secondly, I think we should join the 21st Century and take a more ecumenical approach to the holidays.

The sign that business are given to display says "X-Mas Light Fund." In recent years, our neighborhood has become more diverse. Using the word "holiday" rather than "X-Mas" emphasizes inclusion rather than exclusion.

Denigrating shopkeepers is dreadful and does not build a strong community. The shopkeepers are not Scrooges. They are hard-working individuals who undoubtedly have their own reasons for their actions. I am grateful that we have people willing to invest their time and their money to provide services here.

People who call them nasty names certainly do not represent me.

Annette Benedict

MTA imposes strict eligibility for Access-A-Ride

BY DAVID CRUZ
Access-A-Ride has become a trip to nowhere for some Bronx residents. For some time the Metropolitan Transportation Authority has imposed stricter eligibility guidelines for several disabled folks. Many of them need the service to shuttle around the borough for doctor's appointments and other necessities. The change has created hardships for several users who recently began the application renewal process, unaware of the changes made two years ago. It's happened to one Pelham Bay resident, who asked to be called "Jill Schwarz," fearing reprisal from the MTA if she used her real name. Facing a slew of ailments, Schwarz spent months wrangling with the agency when renewing her application despite receiving clearance years ago. She first went to the MTA-designated medical assessor for an evaluation in Morris Park, undergoing a series of tests, including a mock public bus lift. She couldn't cope. "They're very insensitive, deplorable and demeaning," said Schwarz, 70. "What they put you through is really unnecessary."

Schwarz was downgraded to a "feeder service," a diluted service where taxis shuttle the frail to a nearby bus stop. After hitting a roadblock, Schwarz finally called on Senator Jeff Klein to flex some political muscle. A day later, she was admitted to the Access program.

"Without access to the program many seniors are left without a visit their doctor or a ride to pick up groceries," said Klein. Set for abdominal surgery, the Access-a-Ride user was threatened with a three-month suspension of the service for allegedly failing to appear at her regular location. She was also denied a ride after a driver alleged to have seen the anonymous resident bring a guest.

Her tale has become familiar to Klein's office, which has recently logged a higher volume of complaints from frail Bronxites who depend on the program. To reduce Access-a-Ride even further, the MTA plans to roll out a policy where Access-a-riders can board mass transit for free. It also will expand use of taxis and black car service operators to reduce the cost of a paratransit trip.

"You can't just take an across-the-board bureaucratic approach to it," said Klein.

Lighting way to MP Business Improvement District

BY DAVID CRUZ

Fresh off a victory reviving the Christmas lights tradition, the Morris Park Community Association will use its clout to ramp up efforts to form a local business improvement district.

The group led a last-ditch effort in collecting enough money for the lights, talking local businesses into donating money.

With the lights project out of the way, MPCA head Al D'Angelo will stump with the Morris Park Business Alliance headed by Bobby Ruggiero, who has tried for years to get a Morris Park BID underway.

D'Angelo started the business alliance, tapping Ruggiero to run the group.

The majority of some 300 restaurants, bakeries and grocery stores along the strip fell way short of pitching in with cash donations for the Christmas light decorations, and remain unsure about the overall BID benefits, putting it on a holding pattern.

But Morris Park shops will also hear a pitch from Joe Regina, director of the Bronx Chamber of Commerce newly-created merchant development committee, which helps business areas like Morris Park start BIDs.

Councilman Jimmy Vacca asked Regina, a pragmatist with a sharp business acumen, to lead the development committee after Regina and John Bonizio, owner of Metro Optics Eyewear, successfully formed the Westchester Square BID.

"We're using the Westchester Square model," noted Regina, who describes a Morris Park BID as a "win, win, win. The merchants win, the property owners win, the community wins and the Bronx wins."

In the next few months, Regina and his staff will go shop-to-shop, detailing the benefits for a BID, which collects dues from property owners.

Money will spruce up businesses throughout the area and will also go towards venues like the Christmas light decorations and the Bronx Columbus Day Parade. In already established BIDs, most property owners steer assessment fees onto its merchants.

"They hear money and they shy away," said

D'Angelo. "They should hear the plan out, because it's a good one."

Regina is focusing on outlining the BID benefits to Morris Park merchants.

Italian Home developer fires back

BY PATRICK ROCCHIO

The man leading push to develop a controversial assisted living facility on City Island is firing back at its critics.

Dr. Domenico Mignone, president of the Italian Hospital Society calls the proposed 214-unit Italian Home for the Aged his 'dream.' His likeness was recently depicted on an Obama-like poster at the site, with the words "Dr. Mignone, City Island Says Nope" to the project.

The city Department of Buildings rejected the plans for the building at 222 City Island Avenue on Aug. 22, finding they did not comply with local M1-1 zoning. Mignone is now seeking a variance from the city Board of Standards and Appeals.

The City Island Civic Association has hired a lawyer to argue its case against the project, said CICA vice-president Barbara Dolensek.

Mignone did not return phone calls for comment, but instead e-mailed this newspaper, stating, "I think that opponents of the project should argue against the project in a truthful way and not misrepresent the project to their neighbors. For example, the proposed height is fully in compliance with the height regulations presently in existence for that location."

Mignone added he feels personally slighted by some opponents who have referred

"We're just going left foot, right foot until we need to get where we need to get," said Regina.

Bonizio, also head of the Westchester Square BID, and Joe Thompson, executive director of the White Plains Road BID, will also pitch in.

Bonizio and Regina have also been working to help form a Throggs Neck BID.

to the project as "a [ethnic slur edited] warehousing of seniors" and to him as a "[ethnic slur edited] mafioso doctor," said Mignone.

"It is disgraceful that in NYC, in the year 2012, people can express such hatred for Italian Americans or any New Yorker," he wrote.

The charges of any anti-Italian ethnic sentiment are completely false, Dolensek responded.

The density of the building is the reason for the opposition, she said, noting that its plans call for most rooms to be only 400- or 450-square-feet, with not enough amenities for 214 units.

Two hundred of those would be for assisted living, and 14 would be senior housing, according to plans filed with the BSA.

Dolensek said, "The fact that he wants to pack so much in there without hardly any amenities - what is that, greed? This doesn't look like the way to treat Italian-Americans if you really care about them."

Mignone noted that rooms will be open to all.

Mignone said Community Board 10 has not taken a formal vote on the issue. But chairman John Marano said, "It is too big a development and goes over the height limit," adding that Mignone never answered a question as to where the funding is coming from."

A chili day for FDNY

BY KIRSTEN SANCHEZ

Ring the fire alarm! This Bronx firehouse chili is the best in the borough.

SUNY Maritime College's fifth annual FDNY Chili Cook Off brought a large crowd during the Maritime Privateer's home football game on Saturday, Oct. 26, eager to dig into some bowls of chili with individual firehouse recipes - some of them closely held secrets.

Some recipes called for HOT ingredients that only the Bravest souls would care to sample.

Bringing out their recipes to compete in this year's cook off were firefighters from Engine 79/Ladder 37 firehouse on Briggs Avenue; Engine 50/Ladder 19 firehouse on Washington Avenue; Engine 90/Ladder 41 firehouse on White Plains Road, and Engine 75/Ladder 33 firehouse on Jerome Avenue.

A favorite neighborhood fall event, the competition (but not the meat in the chili) was tough as always.

But it was the red hot firehouse chili cooked up by the chefs of Engine 79/Ladder 37 that took home the glory.

SUNY Maritime College president, Admiral Wendi Carpenter, presented the firefighters there with the award during halftime.

Chili fans were shocked that this was the first time in several years that returning winner Engine 64 failed to capture the title, much less even compete.

"Fans know that this is their chance to taste the very best firehouse chili in the Bronx," said SUNY Maritime football head coach Clayton-Kendrick Holmes. "It's great to see so many of our friends and neighbors each year at the game and sampling the best Bronx chili in town, made by New York's Bravest."

In addition to the FDNY Chili Cookoff, it was also SUNY Maritime Youth Appreciation Day at the Maritime home football game against Husson College.

State Senator Jeff Klein was on hand to meet with youth group organizers and kids from the Sports & Arts in Schools Foundation; the Boy Scouts, Sea Scouts as well as seven area high schools that had a chance to see the college and enjoy the game and chili cookoff.

THIS IS A FUNERAL HOME.

Dear Family,

D'Bari Funeral Home is proud, and humbled, to announce the expansion of "our family" to include Lucia Brothers Funeral Home, a business that has long had a strong tradition of "community" care for 78 years.

D'Bari Funeral Home, is NOT new in this community; we have served our neighborhood family for more than 17 years, never forgetting that even the smallest detail counts when it comes to the passing of a loved one.

We will continue to offer 7 days, 24 hour service. We are honored to serve you during these most challenging moments, in which decision making may be more difficult. We pledge to not only continue this tradition of excellence and caring, but to consistently apply our professional and humane knowledge so that everyone will be treated reverently and respectfully, while being offered the most reasonable and affordable terms. We seek to EARN your trust before, during and after your time of grief and loss.

Lucia Brothers Funeral Home has been refurbished and elegantly re-decorated.

You are more than welcome to visit us and experience the special, warm, tasteful and calming atmosphere.

Family does NOT need invitations - Let us get to know each other now!

Sincerely,
Richard Arce,
NYS Lic. Funeral Director.

Applications available for Bronx Recognizes Its Own

Application and guidelines for the 2013 Bronx Recognizes Its Own (BRIO) awards are now available online on the Bronx Council on the Arts (BCA) website at www.bronxarts.org. This year's online submission deadline is Friday, January 25, 11:59 pm.

This year marks 24 years of BRIO Fellowships demonstrating the Bronx Council on the Arts' ongoing outreach and support to artists creating work in the literary, media, performing, and visual arts.

Bronx artists may apply in one of the following categories: Acting, Choreography, Crafts, Dance, Digital Arts, Fiction, Film Animation, Illustrated Text, Illustration/Artist Book, Installation Art, Instrumental and Vocal Music Performance, Mixed Media, Music Composition, Narrative/Documentary/Experimental Film or Video, Non-Fiction, Painting, Performance Art, Performance Poetry, Photography, Playwriting, Poetry, Printmaking/Drawing, Screenwriting, Sculpture, Spoken Word, and Storytelling.

A total of 25 awards of $3,000 each are available this year to Bronx artists. Eligible applicants must be 18 years or older, live in the Bronx, and not be enrolled as a full-time graduate or undergraduate student. Individuals who work for BCA or who are recipients of any of the Council's awards in 2012 including BRIO, Bronx Writers Center Fellowship Program, or Digital Matrix Commissioning Program are also ineligible.

Application assistance and tips on presenting your work professionally is available at one of five free BRIO workshops to be held on the following dates:

- Wednesday, November 28, 2012, from 3:00-5:00pm, at Hostos Community College, room C-391, 450 Grand Concourse at 149th Street, Bronx NY 10451;
- Thursday, December 13, 2012, from 2:00-4:00pm, at Bronx Council on the Arts @ Westchester Square, 2700 East Tremont Avenue (at St. Raymond Avenue), Bronx, NY 10461;
- Saturday, January 12, 2013, from 3:00-5:00pm, at Bronx Library Center, 310 East Kingsbridge Road, Bronx, NY 10458;
- Friday, January 18, 2013, from 6:00-8:00pm, at Longwood Art Gallery @ Hostos [Community College], 450 Grand Concourse, Bronx NY 10451.

Please RSVP at www.bronxarts.org.

Individual Consultations by appointment only with BRIO Administrator. For Literary Applicants: 1-on-1 half-hour consultations with Bronx Writers Center Director to help prepare your manuscript for BRIO. Call 718-931-9500 ext. 35 for information or e-mail BRIO@bronxarts.org.

The selection of the awards are based solely on artistic excellence and decided by a panel of professional artists of various disciplines. All materials involved in the selection process are kept confidential and are reviewed anonymously. Winners are notified of panel decisions by e-mail approximately four months after the deadline date and are invited to an awards ceremony in June to receive the first payment of $2,500. The remaining balance of $500 is to be paid to the artist upon completion of a community service activity which is required of all awardees.

American Legion College class of 2012

They came here from nearly every state not knowing what to expect. They were challenged from the beginning to demonstrate creativity, leadership and innovation. They are the 55 members of The American Legion College class of 2012, among them, Jerome Rice, a member of American Legion Post 1871.

Members of the class of dedicated, Legionnaires completed a six-day course that saw them lay a solid foundation for American Legion post revitalization in a variety of settings to include a rural area, the inner city, suburban communities, a metropolitan area and a cyber post. They were also provided the instruction and tools to construct resolutions for American Legion activities at their respective posts for presentation at a mock district meeting.

The National American Legion College is designed to reinforce a volunteer's leadership, management and communication skills. This helps prepare young members of The American Legion to lead the nation's largest wartime veterans organization on the local and state level. The importance of mentorship for both other members and special groups in the community was a central point to several of the activities for the class.

"Your journey is just beginning. Now you must take this new found knowledge back to your post, district and department and pass this on to others." American Legion National Commander James Koutz told the graduating class.

Rice was nominated by organizational leaders in the state of New York.

Hurricane Sandy Aftermath

resident George Hernandez. "I want a divorce."

At the Hess Express at 3355 E. Tremont Avenue in Waterbury LaSalle, there was literally controlled pandemonium with the NYPD keeping order, as the line of cars waiting for gas snaked from East Tremont Avenue, around Bruckner Boulevard, and onto Crosby Avenue past Foodtown - more than nine blocks at times - past LaSalle Avenue. People pushed their cars into the station as they had run out of gas at times, rather than pulling up to the pump.

"I was around the during the [oil embargo in the 1970s and the] odd and even days, and this is totally different," said LaSalle Avenue resident Thomas Licursi as he waited to fill his gas can. "We were not prepared for this gas shortage," he said. "We were prepared only for some of the devastation of Hurricane Sandy."

Licursi said that he had visited the same gas station the day before, and that the lines were longer, but that security restrictions because of the massive crowds made for even longer waits at the pump.

The BP Station at 4147 Throgs Neck Expressway next to hard hit Edgewater Park was totally out of gas on Friday afternoon, though the gas station did get one delivery of gas, which sold out in two hours on Wednesday as soon as power came back on, said employee Danny Rodriguez.

Pulling up to the pump only to find that there was no gas was Theresa Everett of Edgewater Park. She and her sister-in-law had been searching for gas visiting all stations along the East Tremont Avenue from Schurz Avenue to Westchester Square, and then lower Westchester County. Everett had visited about seven gas stations in total on Nov. 2, and not a single one had gas.

"Frustrated is a very good word," said Everett. "I would have thought that they would have planned a little better once they realize that gas is not available due to the hurricane."

Everett suggested that authorities should have rationed gas by odd and even plates, like was done during the oil embargo in the 1970s.

Recovery Efforts

Meanwhile, locals were helping bring aid to those badly in need.

The long vacant Kingsbridge Armory has been transformed into a relief center, with volunteers working round the clock to haul supplies to Bronx churches for distribution. Volunteers also worked the phones, calling on churches as far as Florida for donations. Collected food, baby supplies, bottled water and other items were shuttled to Bronx neighborhoods, along with hard-hit Queens and Staten Island.

"It takes a grassroots organization who knows what's happening on the ground to channel information to bigger organizations," said west Bronx City Councilman Fernando Cabrera, spearheading efforts inside the landmark castle.

He said he's desperate for volunteers as the workload piles up.

Among those helping is Man-hattanite SaMi Chester. He spent hours loading and unloading a truck from Convoy of Hope, a disaster response group.

"When people need help, you don't ask questions," said Chester.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency established field operations in the Edgewater Park Volunteer Fire Department Headquarters on Sunday, November 4.

Since early this week, the center had seen about 39 people applying for disaster relief from FEMA, said city officials.

An additional 34 people had also applied for assistance cash assistance, food stamps, and other services from the Human Resources Administration at the firehouse, the city said.

FEMA had set up a tent outside of the building so that its interior could be used as a polling place as scheduled on Tuesday, November 6, said FEMA employee John Schrum.

In addition to being on the scene, a permanent resource center is expected to be established in the borough, said city officials. The most common damage reported around the Bronx was flooding, and damage to roofs, walls and foundations, according to the city.

In nearby Silver Beach, the community center there became a central relief center for eastern Bronx residents. Volunteers shipped supplies to devastated Staten Island.

"The Bronx was hit hard during Hurricane Sandy," said Councilman Jimmy Vacca, "but other areas in our city, such as Staten Island, were hit with incredible damage."

Vacca was joined by U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand and Congressman Joe Crowley at Silver Beach, where the trio lent a hand to volunteers, loading boxes of can goods and supplies for Staten Island residents.

With more recovery efforts needed, Vacca will host a weeklong collection drive for areas affected by Sandy, with help also coming from Community Board 10.

He's asking anyone to donate cleaning supplies, non-perishable food and heavy-duty garbage bags to his office 3040 East Tremont Avenue from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

But despite bleak situation kids at P.S. 14 in Waterbury-Lasalle are pitching in the relief efforts.

A project to help raise $20,000 for the American Red Cross of Greater New York by students was started to by fourth grade teacher Noelle Gold and will involve the entire school community. Youngsters from all over the school community collect money in cans that will be funneled directly to the Red Cross, said Gold.

A website was set up by Gold and students are expected to begin their fund raising efforts on Wednesday, Nov. 7.

“Our informal motto is ‘kids can make a change,’” said Gold.

The P.S. 14 students will be asking for spare change to aid victims of Hurricane Sandy from neighbors, relatives, friends, local community and church groups, and businesses.

There should be two concerts to raise money as well, with dates and times still to be decided.

The idea resulted from a Facebook post that had Gold collaborating with a friend in California, James Kastner, and another on City Island, who provided photos from the island of the devastation of Hurricane Sandy, said Gold.

Ongoing Damages

Locally, power outages remain the big problem for some neighborhoods.

The bulk of Morris Park, impacted by days of no power, had its juice turned back on Sunday night. Pelham Parkway South near Lydig Avenue, however, remained in the dark on Monday.

In Woodlawn, power problems persisted at a nine-story building housing a large number of seniors, many with health issues.

Without power, seniors at the Mitchell-Lama building are stranded inside their homes, refusing to walk the dark corridors.

“There’s people who can’t get out,” said Jim Murphy, a 30-year tenant who’s become somewhat of a hall monitor, leading the elderly up and down stairwells.

“This is like the Old West,” said Peggy Hogan, 67, a 15-year tenant who called the outage the worst she’s lived through.

“I can’t use my oxygen machine,” said Jerry Binassinski, a senior living with COPD, a breathing condition. His electric-powered machine has been out of commission since the storm.

Meanwhile power’s been out at 1100 Stadium Avenue, an 80+ apartment unit on Eastchester Bay in Country Club. Power from a blown out transformer on Layton Avenue powering the seven-story building’s heating, hot waters and elevator, was out since Hurricane Sandy struck, according to building superintendent Henry Hernandez. It was still out as of press time.

Two electricians traced the problem to a blown transformer on Layton Avenue, and Con-Ed was notified, according to Hernandez and tenants interviewed.

Power to that would be back on at the latest by Nov. 9, according to a notice posted in the building’s lobby.

The blackout has impacted Maria Fairhurst, who said that she had double-bypass surgery and could not walk up and down several flights of stairs to the laundry room or to carry groceries.

Fairhurst said that the response from Con Edison and the management should have been more compassionate.

“At least fix the elevator, because you have handicapped people whose lives are being affected by this,” said Fairhurst.

She understands that people have lost their lives and homes, but added that fixing this one situation could possible prevent further injury.

“People have it a lot worse than this,” said Fairhurst. “People have lost their lives and homes. Just address this one concern. Make people feel that they are really concerned and want to address this.”

Compounding outage issues is plenty of structural damage canvassing Locust Point.

The Locust Point Civic Association’s building at 3300 Tierney Pl. sustained major water damage when surf from Long Island Sound flooded a hole in the foundation of the building, said LPCA board member Chrys Napolitano. The association leases the waterfront building from the city, and the next move appears to be unclear.

“We don’t know if our Civic house can be saved or if it will have to be demolished - or at the very least - be gutted,” said Napolitano.

Without use of the Civic house efforts to aid Locust Point’s victims of Sandy were hampered, said Napolitano.

The seafront portions of Tierney Pl. began flooding last week, and water started to back up out of sewers, she said.

Ironically, for the most part, the new playground equipment on the LPCA’s grounds survived Sandy, though much of the new landscaping was ruined, said Napolitano.

car gas gauges, the borough was still picking itself up and drying out this week.

And as folks got on their feet, the tales from Hurricane Sandy were being told, with acts of kindness by many to less fortunate, surveys of damage, and working back to normalcy, if even to making sure the Bronx Zoo was open for visitors to take their minds off things, if even for an afternoon.

As tales from the Superstorm Sandy pile up, many in the borough - whether individuals or organizations - want their story told.

Survivor of storms past

Out on City Island, one of the coastal areas hardest hit by Superstorm Sandy, 66-year resident Ann McGuire of Schofield Street said that for those hardest hit by Sandy, it will be considered a terrible storm.

However, she pointed out that in 1938 the house her husband grew up in on Hunter Avenue flooded with six feet of water, and from what she understands from its current owner, it flooded with four feet of water during Sandy. She pointed out that many on the quaint, tight little island were fortunate to have electricity during the storm.

McGuire had lived in the house her husband grew up in on Hunter Avenue until about 15 years ago, and said she believed that the worst storm in terms of its effect on City Island in that time was Hurricane Gloria in 1985.

"We have survived so many storms on this island, you never know how it is going to effect everybody," said McGuire. "But I don't think it was the worst."

Floating Pier

Senator Jeff Klein, who was making the rounds of his district, helping out by bringing Sanitation trucks in and information on where to file for help from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, recalled during one stop in hard hit Locust Point seeing an entire dock, still intact but dislodged from its pillings, floating past a neighbor's house after the storm.

Storm Bound

As Con Edison was giving away dry ice at an event organized by Assemblyman Carl Heastie at the Eastwood Manor in Baychester on Monday, Nov. 5. Sybil Daley of 3340 Gunther Avenue still did not have power for lights and refrigeration, and got dry ice at the event to keep her food cold.

"[I have] been calling everybody trying to get some help because I have to sleep with a sleep apnea machine and I have sarcoidosis in my lungs, and so I have to stay in the warm, not in the cold," said Daley. "The cold effects my lungs."

Con Edison visited her home and told her that work needed to be done on a transformer, and that power may be out until Friday, Nov. 9, she said.

"We have to dress in layers, and we have two small children," said Daley. "It's been very hard and they have been out of school the whole last week."

Lighting The Way

Catherine Diab of Woodlawn lost power in her building on Tuesday, Oct. 30 as the worst of Sandy blew through. Three days later, she was still without power and concerned about the cold.

She was still able to heat up water since the gas was still working.

She was walking around the apartment with a coat on and mostly worried about her 14-year-old dog Peanut, who was sleeping with a flannel blanket.

She said if temperatures dip, she will take up her friend's offer to stay at the house for a while.

Merchants along Katonah Avenue have been helpful, she said, letting her charge her cell phone, while her landlord was able to bring battery-powered flashlights for her building while it was still in the dark. But she had to throw away a lot of food.

Senator Jeff Klein brought latens donated by Home Depot to her building on Friday, Nov. 2.

To Be Rescheduled

Hurricane Sandy forced a number of cancellations and postponements across the Bronx, with some events still in need of rescheduling.

The Bronx Chamber of Commerce postponed its Tenth Annual Banquet set for Thursday, Nov. 1, with a future date to be planned.

Borough President Diaz also moved his Bronx Annual Pumpkinfest Halloween Spooktacular at the Justice Sonia Sotomayor Community Center on Rosedale Avenue forward a day, from Wednesday, Oct. 31 to Thursday, Nov. 1.

Cardinal Hayes High School had to postpone its Hall of Fame Dinner Dance, set for Saturday at the Marina del Rey in Throggs Neck, saying it will notify "the Hayes family" once it's rescheduled. "We pray that you are all safe and wish everyone a speedy clean-up and recovery."

The City Island Theater Group, faced with no power on the island, cancelled its Halloween Haunted House at the local community center. But in the tradition of the show must go on, it's production of the "The Man Who Came To Dinner" opened a six-performance run Friday, Nov. 9. Profits from its highest grossing night will go to the Mayor's Fund to Advance New York City to support hurricane aid needs. Email tickets@cityislandtheatergroup.com.

Animals And Trees

The borough's biggest tourist attractions were open for business, with the Bronx Zoo pretty much all right, but its sister attraction across Fordham Road in need of some clean-up.

The zoo reopened Saturday, Nov. 3 in fine shape. That was unlike the Wildlife Conservation Society's sister attraction in Brooklyn, the Coney Island Aquarium, which suffered major damage, including extensive flooding, said Jim Brehe, Bronx Zoo director and executive vice president of WCS Zoos and Aquarium.

Meanwhile, at the New York Botanical Gardens, the living collections at the garden sustained some damages, including trees, fences, small structures, signs, and one building at the 250-acre bucolic borough attraction.

"While we are still assessing the damage, initial surveys reveal that over 100 native trees in the Forest and throughout the landscape, including some of our ancient and most magnificent oaks, were destroyed," said garden spokesman Nick Leshi.

"Hundreds of mature pines, spruces, and firs in the Ross Conifer Arboretum and Benenson Ornamental Conifers and other irreplaceable collections of trees across the Garden were damaged," he said. "Over the next few days, curators and arborists will carefully inspect trees across the landscape for broken and damaged limbs and other substantial damage not immediately apparent after the storm."

Clean up efforts began even before Superstorm Sandy moved inland, he said.

Many sections of the garden, including the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory, re-opened to the public on Thursday, Nov. 1.

Up in Riverdale over at Wave Hill, with its majestic views of the Hudson River and the Jersey Palisades, Jundtjajethe In riverAt Wave Hill in Riverdale, power finally came back on Sun. Nov. 4.

Bronx Council on the Arts Fall Creations Workshop

The Bronx Council on the Arts and the Huntington Free Library present a family-friendly, hands-on “Fall Creations” craft workshop with Denise Shelley on Saturday, November 17, from 12:30 to 3 p.m. at the Huntington Free Library, 9 Westchester Square, next to the Apple Savings Bank). This workshop is free and open to the public. All are welcome.

In this fun-filled workshop, artisan Denise Shelley will use all of the colors of a fall rainbow to help you will create crafts ranging from beautiful centerpieces to silly googly-eyed turkeys using new and re-purposed materials to make fantastic, one of a kind keepsakes.

Denise Shelley has always found joy doing anything that unleashes her creative energy. After surviving the tragedy of 9/11, Denise Shelley embraced the healing mechanism of creativity and began sharing her love of crafting with others by conducting various workshops. This native New Yorker’s artwork has been featured in local galleries and exhibits.

The family craft workshop series continues on December 15 when BCA presents Holiday Ornaments with Gail Sharbaan. Create your own holiday ornaments! Plenty of glitter, glue and cheer available. Please bring family, friends and the desire to be creative. See you then!

This workshop is the final in the 2011-2012 series of Third Saturday Family Craft Workshops presented by BCA and HFL at the Huntington Free Library. Visit www.bronxarts.org regularly for updates on the 2012-2013 Saturday Family Craft workshop series as well as other programs and activities of the Bronx Council on

East Bronx History Forum

BY THOMAS X. CASEY
The Huntington Free Library and The East Bronx History Forum announce the forum's 75th meeting will be on a special date and host a special presenter. Due to early Thanksgiving, the East Bronx History Forum will meet on Wednesday November 14 at 7:30 p.m.

The guest presenter is Bronx special investigator Tom Walker. Walker will share his real life experiences as the former commander of the 41st Precinct and compare those fictional references in his book "Fort Apache". The highlight of the night will be Walker's crime solving partner, the legendary Sherlock Holmes. Holmes will come to the Bronx and other venues in the U.S. to break the case wide open with deductive reasoning.

This leads to the title of Walker's book and presentation: How Sherlock Holmes Deduced "Break The Case Clues On" The BTK Killer, The Son of Sam, Unabomber and Anthrax Cases. It should be noted that this is not a book of fiction, but a true account of the investigative techniques used by law enforcement as practiced by Sherlock Holmes. Walker also partnered with Holmes in August, 1976 on "The $128,000 Question" television game show.

All meetings are free and open to the public at The Huntington Free Library and Reading Room, located at 9 Westchester Square.

View the East Bronx History Forum web page at BronxNYC.com for details, or on Facebook.

Hello all!

Senator Jeff Klein invites all Vets and Active Duty Military Personnel to his Annual Veteran's Day Breakfast on Sunday, November 18 at 9 a.m. at the Villa Barone Manor. As space is limited, only one guest is allowed. RSVP a must, call his office at (718) 822-2049 before November 14.

Meanwhile, back at the Post, we are again collecting non-perishable food stuffs for the needy. No ice cream please and no frozen foods. Dry goods, boxed food and jarred food will be accepted. Don't come knocking on our door as the food is being donated to a Church. We will include the perishables at the time of delivery. My loyal readers have responded well to this request in the past and I'm sure they will again.

It's "Blow Your Own Horn Time." Let me tell you what we do. We are on our third Adopted Platoon of the 10th Mountain Division out of Fort Drum. This group will be deployed to Afghanistan in January of 2013 and we will be sending them goodies and care packages.

sent to an upstate school and learns how a law is enacted here in New York State. The boys spend a week electing a governor, State Senators and Assembly persons, creating a bill and passing it. It's a great experience.

As a result of The Drunken Volley Ball Tournament, we donate vast sums of money to Calvary Hospital. We will get to them soon as they are busy accepting patients from hospitals which were affected by Hurricane Sandy.

We teach a Hunter Safety Course sponsored by the New York State Department of Conservation. After passing this course you are eligible to apply for a hunting license.

We help vets with temporary financial assistance in accordance with Department and National Guidelines.

We sponsor two BBQs at the VA Hospital where we buy and cook there food for the shut-ins. While we're on this, we sponsor a Christmas/Holiday Party for the shut-ins as well. This time we have Santa and Mrs. Claus with us as well as a few elves. (I think that they are really Trolls.)

We donate to the Legion's National Emergency Fund which helps out Legion members in times of disasters. Like the one just passed. Log onto www.americanlegionnef

Were in schools teaching about the Flag, how to display it, where it is in the line of march etc. this is no longer taught in school. I think the teachers get educated as well.

I'll think of some more for next week.

What can you say... to complete devastation of our fellow citizens who lost their precious homes, priceless memories and some their lives...what can you say? Minus the folly of considering to hold the NYC Marathon, visions of need and destruction were opened to our view and, as always, we arose to the occasion. Citizen helped citizen in whatever way they could. Many associations were able to get donations together and ship them out. Silver Beach bused out clothes and other essentials to the Rockaways and Breezy Point last weekend. Other associations helped as well...As The saga continues, we will prevail. The executive board asks that you give in you own way, whatever you can. We will let you know if we find a local outlet we can join together to help things along.

of 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily. Before you go to apply for assistance, you must pre-register or you will be sent home to do so.

FEMA has set up a disaster assistance service center in the Bronx at Edgewater Park.

Also officials from the Small Business Administration(SBA) are on site here too. To apply for assistance:www.DisasterAssistance.gov1-800-462-7585 - TTY number 1-800-621-3362 Please provide the following info: your address, names of people in your household, description of the disaster damage, insurance information, your social security number, a phone number where you can be reached or a message can be left, mailing address, and if you want FEMA to send disaster assistance funds to your bank. Please provide the FEMA agent, your account type, account number and routing number. Please pass this information on to any neighbor who may be in need. As more information unfolds, we will pass it on to our members.

Email Addresses

It is so important that we have all of your email addresses, so as information comes into us, we can send it out directly to our members. We did send out an email last weekend cancelling our October 30th meeting because of the storm and we sent out an email regarding the opening of the FEMA station at Edgewater. We could have told you sooner if we had all of your email addresses.

Please consider calling us at (718) 823-0327 so we can add you to our list. Our next meeting and last for the year will be held on Tuesday, November 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Villa Barone Manor.

We are working on our speakers at the moment and will announce them as soon as we are firmed up.

3 charged in shooting

Three men have been indicted on charges of felony murder and other offenses in connection with a shooting in which a bodega employee was shot and killed.

The grand jury charged defendants Ernesto Delgado, Christopher Dorsey and Orlando Ramos with one count of Murder in the 2nd degree, two counts of Robbery in the 1st degree, four counts of Robbery in the 2nd degree, and two counts of Burglary in the 2nd degree. The top count of Murder in the 2nd degree is a Class A-1 felony offense punishable by a maximum sentence of 25 years to life imprisonment.

Delgado, 28, Dorsey, 17, and Ramos, 32, all of 1701 Eastburn Avenue, the Bronx, were arraigned on the indictment in State Supreme Court Part before Acting Supreme Court Justice Denis Boyle.

All three defendants are being held without bail. The next court appearance is December 6.

Officials charged that

Delgado, Dorsey and Ramos, while "acting - in - concert" entered a bodega, located at 1299 Franklin Avenue, armed with a gun. The defendants ordered the workers to get on the floor while one defendant took money and personal property. As police arrived on the scene, workers ran out of the store and one, Reynaldo Cuevas, 20, was shot and killed by a responding officer. That aspect of the incident remains under review.

Attorney convicted of grand larceny

A disbarred attorney has been convicted of grand larceny and practicing law without a license.

District Attorney Robert Johnson said a jury convicted Kehinde Jobi, 45, on three counts of grand larceny and eight counts of Judicially Disbarred Attorney Practicing Law, after deliberating for less than one day. Acting State Supreme Court Justice Martin Marcus set sentencing for November 7. Jobi is being held without bail. She faces 5 to 15 years imprisonment. On October 23, 2008, the defendant was suspended from practicing law in New York State, but continued to represent herself as an attorney.

Jobi, of 1407 Crotona Avenue, stole more than $53,000 from ten victims and represented clients in other proceedings involving a divorce, a bankruptcy and one case involving the guardianship of an elderly woman, working out of her law office at 95 E. 161st St.

FRANK V. VERNUCCIO, JR.

Now that the national campaigns have ended, New Yorkers can focus on the 2013 mayoral elections, and not a moment too soon. There are insidious issues that have been scrupulously ignored for far too long.

Key aspects of life in the Big Apple have deteriorated sharply since Mayor Giuliani left office. There are fewer police and higher taxes. Small businesses face more harassing regulations, and motorists must deal with exorbitant parking fees and a bizarre misuse of streets. Our education system, despite having undergone organizational changes over the past decade, continues to underperform.

All of this occurred despite a city budget that has skyrocketed from $40 billion in 2001 to $68.5 billion in 2012.

BY BILL HEANEY

On Sunday October 28, as Hurricane Sandy approached New York City, Throggs Neck Volunteer Ambulance Corps, your local free ambulance commenced four days of continuous availability to the community.

Hearty congratulations are in order for the brave members who stayed from Sunday until Wednesday morning, ensuring that the TNVAC was available to provide prompt emergency care to everyone in need during

While those problems are real and serious, there is a more subtle, and perhaps even more important, threat to NYC's well-being. It has to do with a profound refusal of this town's power brokers to play by the rules, and the emergence of a two-class system, where the powerful can safely ignore the standards everyone else must comply with.

Perhaps the most blatant example came with the banana-republic tactic that allowed the mayor and the city council to utterly ignore several referendums in which the voters approved term limits. Add to that the in-your-face tenure of a deputy mayor who is also on the private payroll of the mayor.

New Yorkers have been subjected to obviously false reports by city agencies. We are constantly informed the worst storm to hit the east coast in decades. Their efforts demonstrate to our community the importance of the TNVAC and the tenacity of its crews. Despite losing power and phone service, the base and TNVAC's two ambulances remained fully staffed by dispatchers, drivers, and state certified EMTs. During the crisis members responded to different types of medical calls and assisted in water rescues throughout the community.

During the height of the storm, many of our mem-

It was a definitely a historic week on Pelham Parkway South, just as it was throughout New York City and the entire Northeast. Detriment was brought to us, but it also brought out the best in us.

Following the comera-darie that prevailed during the seven days following Hurricane Sandy, we wish to continue this feeling of genuine charity and community during our next Pelham Parkway Neighborhood Association monthly meeting, taking place this coming Tuesday, November 13, at 7 p.m. in Bronx House Community Center, located at 990 Pelham Parkway South.

In our yearly tradition of gobbles and delights, we will have our beloved Councilman Jimmy Vacca there to engage in an informed, at-ease dialogue with all residents that attend. In addition, for all neighborhood residents that are paying members of our neighborhood association, they will be entered into a raffle to win a free turkey, frozen and ready-to-go for the coming holiday that signifies being grateful for what we have. And after this tumultuous week, we certainly are thankful.

that "traffic flow is improving," despite the weird practice of closing off portions of key streets for so-called "pedestrian malls" and bike lanes. Anyone with a driver's license and a brain will readily contradict that whopper.

We have the laughable refusal by the NYC Campaign Finance Board (CFB) to see anything wrong with the mayor's outright purchase of his third term with over $100 million of his private funds—this, from the organization that allegedly was formed "to take the influence of money out of politics." (This is, of course, the same agency that goes along with the outrageous concept of not allowing candidates to participate in televised debates unless they have raised a substantial amount of cash.)

Nor, apparently, has it objected to the mayor's not-so subtle bid to keep his influence alive after he leaves office through the use of a PAC, financed by his personal fortune.

It's not so much the fact that the mayor spends his own money that's offensive; he has a right to do so. But the CFB strictly enforces copious and draconian rules that are, essentially, "bureaucracy on steroids," on certain candidates. Those without the support of party bosses or the wealth to keep armies of lawyers and accountants on staff are faced with hurdles that clearly limit their ability to effectively compete in the political arena. Further, those without the benefit of high-paid or well-connected representatives are treated far more harshly by the CFB.

COMACTA continues to argue against the increasing trend in New York of "Government by, for, and of the politicians."

Postscript: In the aftermath of the recent hurricane, NYC's government did what it does best—it made a bad situation worse. Mayor Bloomberg instituted a three-person rule for vehicles entering Manhattan. To enforce that rule, he established checkpoints at chokepoints around the island—and caused massive traffic jams. Then he angered residents outside of Manhattan by stating that "all New York" would have power by the weekend; it turns out that he only meant Manhattan. It has also been reported that he diverted supplies from hurricane recovery efforts to support the NYC Marathon.

Normally, the damage that a chief executive with harmful personal eccentricities (such as Bloomberg) causes can be limited by a legislature. However, the New York City Council has continuously prostituted itself to the power and money of Mayor Bloomberg. It notoriously did so in its rejection of the will of the people over term limits. It is doing so again as Speaker Quinn surrenders the independence of her office in return for Bloomberg's support of her mayoral bid.

Veteran dispatcher and "House Mom" Laura D'Attore kept her "children" safe.

On Monday morning chairperson Ruth Leich provided the crews a big breakfast consisting of eggs and French toast, and Monday and Tuesday nights, our friends and neighbors at the Wicked Wolf, specifically bartender Emer Timoney and manager Kathy Gallagher sent us hot food to help us stay warm as well as to nourish us.

Throughout the duration of the hurricane, Bob D'Attore, TNVAC operations building maintenance officer, was in and out to check on things. In addition, dispatcher training officer, Yves Gnassingbe (Att/Disp.), checked in on things while accomplishing other tasks and 3rd generation member Jason Engeldrum (Att/Disp.) was on standby as well.

These actions by the dedicated members of TNVAC once again shows that there is truth in our motto, "We can do Magic!"

New members are always welcome. For further information about TNVAC, feel free to call 718) 430-9501 or email us at WHeaney@tnvac.us.

Klein, Councilman Jimmy Vacca, Mark Gjonaj and CB 11 district manager Jeremy Warneke for all the efforts in coordinating and communicating with our citizens, and for their sense of urgency in expediting the return of power.

It was great to see all the food being offered from local businesses and charities to those who never really had gone through such an event like this before. It was gratifying to see, especially the elderly, drinking a hot cup of coffee with a bagel and getting warm in Mark Gjonaj's office. We truly saw a community come together in time of need. And To those people who are still without power, please let us know what we can do.

Another very useful place to go is our Facebook page and Bronx Community Board 11's Facebook page. Both of these pages served very useful in expediting the flow of information to those who needed it most during the leadup and aftermath of Sandy, creating a true sense of community, albeit within the bounds of the computer screen.

If you have not signed up for a Facebook account, it is recommended. At minimum, sign up for an email account with any of the many email service providers that there are out there. It's not just about being hip, it's really becoming an issue of equal rights.

Our local Library Branch, under the direction of the very capable and helpful David Nochimson, offers computer literacy and training classes, all free of charge for you to take advantage of. And the Library boasts 8 speedy computers, available 6 days a week, where you can keep on top of the flow of information that comes through the channels of the world

And be sure to keep your calendar open for our upcoming Community engagement activities, as we will be painting graffiti-laden and tarnished mailboxes in our community with a fresh coating of blue and green.

The paint will be provided from Senator Jeff Klein's office. We will be sure to notify you at least a week in advance.

Until then, carry on that spirit of community and comera-darie that prevailed after the ruins of the Hurricane. Remain Positive and remain resilient.

Monte studys surgical performance

In a paper published today in Archives of Otolaryngology-Head & Neck Surgery entitled "Criterion-Based (Proficiency) Training to Improve Surgical Performance," researchers at Montefiore Medical Center have demonstrated that current requirements for surgical proficiency, including the performance of a fixed number of surgeries, insufficiently assesses surgical capabilities and does not take into consideration individual learning differences. The paper also reveals that simulation training can vastly improve trainee surgeons' skills prior to operating on live patients.

Marvin P. Fried, MD, FACS, University Chairman Department of Otorhinolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery at Montefiore Medical Center, was the Principle Investigator of this study, which took place over a five year period and is the last in a series of studies carried out by Dr. Fried and his team.

"We have been studying this subject since 2000 and the results of each of our studies have shown that technical abilities are highly individualistic, skill levels progress at varying speeds. Simulation training is an invaluable tool in creating a competent surgeon in a safe and controlled environment, which ultimately helps to ensure patient safety and produce the best outcomes," said Dr. Fried.

In the paper published today, 20 subjects from Montefiore Medical Center and New York University Medical Center were divided into three groups. 14 Otorhinolaryngology junior residents in post-graduate year 1-3, were designated to either the experimental group which had eight subjects, or the control group which had six subjects. There was also a third group of six attending surgeons who set the benchmark against which the other groups were compared.

All three groups performed Endoscopic Sinus Surgery, a procedure undergone by over 500,000 people per year, which involves removing blockages in the sinuses, allowing increased air flow through and enabling the nose to drain properly.

During this surgery, an endoscope is inserted through the nostrils, allowing the doctor to identify the blocked areas and remove the blockages with surgical instruments.

Associated risks can be damage to the eye or injury to the brain.

The experimental group was trained to proficiency on the simulator and the control group was trained in the current standard fashion by performing a limited number of defined sinus surgery procedures. Both groups were then compared to each other and with the attending surgeons who were experts in this type of procedure.

This is in contrast to current surgical training which typically lasts for a specified time period or number of procedures, thereby producing surgeons with variable skill levels - a practice that is becoming less acceptable for patient safety.

Bronx CAN health initiative - Changing Attitudes Now

BY PATRICK ROCCHIO

A Bronx health initiative is going borough-wide.

The Bronx CAN health initiative - Changing Attitudes Now - is designed to tackle fitness, nutrition, obesity and exercise issues, and provide some access to preventative health care screenings.

It recently got a boost from The Coca-Cola Foundation, with a $75,000 grant to the year-old organization to improve health outcomes in the borough.

West Bronx state Senator Gustavo Rivera launched Bronx CAN in 2011 in response to a health study that ranked the borough as the unhealthiest county in New York State.

The new grant will help expand the program beyond Rivera's 33rd Senate District to the entire borough.

It will help Bronxites make healthier lifestyle decisions, said Borough President Ruben Diaz Jr. who was on hand for the Oct. 22 funding announcement at Macombs Dam Park, along with representatives from the Coca-Cola Foundation, and the East Side Settlement House which also receives funding for nutrition education programs serving 1,200 south Bronx residents.

"This grant will have a large, positive impact on countless residents in this great borough and shows how we can all work together to help members of our community, young and old, start making healthier decisions," said Diaz while thanking the Coca-Cola Foundation.

"Issues of obesity, diabetes, and heart disease start with bad health habits at a young age. The Bronx CAN Health Initiative will continue to inspire Bronxites to take responsibility over their own health and make changes to their habits."

Dr. Victor Soriano of Lincoln Medical Center said state Department of Health statistics show about 68% of Bronxites are either overweight or obese, and 11.8% have been diagnosed with diabetes.

The number of Bronxites with diabetes or its early stages might actually be much higher, Soriano said, citing federal Centers for Disease Control reports that a third of all people in the United States may not know they have diabetes or could be pre-diabetic.

Calvary's 6th annual Pastoral Care Day

Calvary Hospital hosted its 6th annual Pastoral Care Day for spiritual care providers, doctors, nurses, social workers and other health care professionals from throughout the greater New York area.

The theme of this year's event was "Giving Voice."

An interfaith panel of nationally recognized clinical pastoral care experts discussed end-of-life care in various cultures and faith traditions.

For the first time, Calvary's event included representatives from the Hindu and Chinese communities.

The speakers included: Rev. Mary Chang, Pastor, Lutheran Church of the Incarnation; Fr. John Fraser, M.Div. MA, Roman Catholic Priest and a Funeral Director; Rev. Dale Irvin, President, New York Theological Seminary; and Dr. Uma V. Mysorekar, President, Hindu Temple Society of North America.

Each speaker also led a workshop. Rev. Chang provided a thorough historical overview of Chinese immigrants in New York City and spotlighted cultural practices and end-of-life rituals that are essential to caring sensitively for this complex and diverse community. Fr. Fraser gave the Roman Catholic Christian perspective on giving voice to people at the end of their lives. Rev. Irvin moderated an open forum on the spiritual care experiences of many attendees. Dr. Mysorekar provided a basic primer on Hinduism and spotlighted what healthcare professionals can expect when dealing with patients of this popular faith.

Attendees earning 4.5 continuing education credits.

Spiritual care providers, doctors, nurses, and other health care professionals from throughout New York City attended Calvary Hospital's 6th Annual Pastoral Care Day to learn from an interfaith panel of nationally recognized clinical pastoral care experts.

Healthfirst/Bronx Lebanon's on-site integrated health care

BY PATRICK ROCCHIO

A new wellness initiative promises to bring health education directly to residents of NYC Housing Authority buildings in Claremont Village.

Healthfirst has kicked-off a new three year program in collaboration with NYCHA and Bronx Lebanon Hospital to provide residents with on-site integrated health care systems in the complexes.

The new initiative will service Butler Houses, Gouverneur Morris I and II houses, Morrisania Houses, Daniel Webster Houses, and the Claremont Parkway and Franklin Avenue area over the next three years.

A kickoff breakfast was held Oct. 20 at the William Hobson Senior Center that included free health screenings.

"The Healthfirst Healthy Village Initiative gets people to take charge of their health by bringing the system to them with the efficiency and convenience of having a support system available at the foot of their door," said George Hulse, Healthfirst vice-president.

The Healthy Village Initiative focuses on four key ingredients to better health: medical wellness, physical wellness, nutritional wellness, and weight loss, said officials, with plans developed for residents to lose weight over a 24- to 36-month period.

"Integrating the healthcare delivery system that is high-quality, patient-centered, and offers healthy lifestyle options are the backbone for the creation of the Healthfirst Healthy Village Initiative," said Dr. Susan Beane, Healthfirst vice-president and medical director.

Grace Hunter, who has lived in the Webster Houses for the past 22 years and has been tenant association president for 11 years, will be one of the program supporters drawing neighbors' attention to it.

She is especially delighted to see that community children will be learning healthy lifestyles together with their parents.

"We have a diverse community, and I always advocate for children first," said

Hunter, also secretary of the Claremont Community Center. "Children will engage with their parents in preparing healthy meals and making nutritious snacks.

There is so many different things that they will be able to do together."

P.S. 205 Big Cats Sister School

BY KIRSTEN SANCHEZ

Students of the Big Cats Sister School Program are causing an uproar.

Beginning in fall 2012, the program will pair students at PS 205 in Crotona Park and other U.S. schools with schools in Kenya, Tanzania and Botswana under the shared theme of big cat conservation.

Students in all four countries will learn why big cats are important to the ecosystem and how they each perceive big cats in their own countries, using photos, letters, essays, stories, virtual assemblies and other forms of digital media to connect.

The student groups will also interact with National Geographic conservationists and Nat Geo WILD television channel talent to raise awareness about the severe decline of the big cat population in the wild.

The U.S. students will create and conduct high-profile activities in their schools and communities to spread the word about the significance and scope of this crisis. In the Bronx, PS 205 will be one of the U.S. schools participating.

"PS 205's participation in the National Geographic Big Cats Sister School Program is a wonderful opportunity for our students to spread awareness about the decline of Big Cats in the wild," said principal Carol Ann Rosado. "It is an enriching cultural learning experience for them."

National Geographic's Big Cats Initiative is a long-term commitment to halt the decline of these iconic animals in the wild through on-the-ground conservation projects, education and a global public awareness campaign.

The program, launched by the National Geographic Society and Nat Geo WILD, provides teachers and students an opportunity to help save big cats throughout the school year as well as engage in a cultural exchange.

"This program will help connect children around the globe on the important topic of big cat conservation," said Alexander Moen, National Geographic's vice president, Explorer Programs. "We need future generations to recognize the importance of saving our planet's predators so that 40 years from now they won't look back on lions the way we now look back on dinosaurs."

St. Frances de Chantal walks to raise funds to fight cancer

Participants of the St. Frances de Chantal walkathon raised funds to help fight cancer.

The entire school community of St. Frances de Chantal came together on Thursday, October 4, for a walkathon to raise funds to help fight cancer.

Teachers, Victoria Galasso and Catherine McElroy organized this event for the school and the students received donations for each completed lap from family and friends.

All monies raised will be donated to different organizations that deal with cancer either directly or indirectly.

The donations will be made "in memory of" or to honor someone in the school community who has been affected by cancer.

All donations are made to organizations approved by the Archdiocese of New York.

Operation College and Career Fair

The First Annual Co-op City Operation College and Career Fair will be held on Saturday, November 17 at 177 Dreiser Loop Auditorium, in Co-op City, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for grades 3 to 6 and grades 7 to 12 from 1 to 6 p.m.

The event is sponsored by Co-op City, Riverbay Fund.

According to Evelyn M. Turner, Riverbay Corporation board member, "Co-op City is the largest residential development in the U.S., created through the Mitchell-Lama program to serve middle and upper middle income families and individuals of diverse backgrounds.

Located in the Northeast section of the Bronx, Co-op City has more than 50,000 residents many of whom have children attending grades 3 through 12 that deserve a fair chance to gain better access to stellar academic advice and financial resources to help them succeed in the future."

The fair will offer one-on-one educational advice and informational resources to help students and their parents navigate the educational system and better compete beyond high school.

Students and parents will interact with college representatives, certified admissions counselors and qualified test preparation advisors. There will also be concurrent interactive workshops for students covering College Saving Plans, Scholarships, Grants, and Financial Aid. Also available will be free 2013 High School and Specialized Schools Directories.

A partial list of the nations' best higher learning institutions participating are: Bethune-Cookman University, Johnson C. Smith University, Dillard University, (New Orleans, La) North Carolina Central University, Morgan State University, Harvard, Wellesley, Hunter Bellevue School of Nursing, Monroe College, College of New Rochelle, Ithaca College, Mercy College, William College, Kingsborough Community College, Lehman College/CUNY, Hartwick College, Bronx Community College, Berkeley College, The College of Westchester and more.....Participants will also interact with representatives offering Career Opportunities such as: Brick Masonry, Medicine, The Mortgage Cake Lady, Beauty Culture, Military, Sales, Entrepreneurship, Maritime Careers, Allied Health Institute, and more.

For further information call Evelyn M. Turner, LCSW, at (718) 320-8088 or (917) 324-1033.

DeBlasio Warns
Consumers About
Classified Ads

Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble.
Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitating communication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. In some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of vague classifieds because they too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."

PIPE DREAMS

By Bob Connolly

Thank You

Thanks to my neighbors for helping me to operate my power recliner in Sandy's aftermath. This type neighborliness is nothing new for Edgewater. It's been going on for generations.

Jeff's A Gem

A very special thank you to State Senator Jeff Klein for working some very special magic to help get my power up and working.

Speaking Of Sandy

This wasn't "Little Orphan Annie's" Sandy. I heard there was a guy on Tremont Avenue selling Arks, named Noah da Ark Guy. He said, "Yes, I am related." He said that he was also related to Jeanne D'Arc but she was more into a career in millinery but her HS guidance counselor misheard and thought she said military-the rest is history.

Week 8

Dolphins 30 Jets 9

Did the Jets play the Dolphins on the 28th - because they didn't show up for it? Maybe they were hoping for Sandy to arrive early.

It wasn't just the blocked Jet punt that allowed a Miami TD. It wasn't just the blocked field goal. It wasn't just the un-covered on-side Miami kick off. It wasn't just the 57yd runback of a Jet kickoff after a Jet field goal resulting in a TD. It was everything. Good teams find a way to win and bad teams always find ways to lose.

Sandy effects all Bronx HS sports

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

Hurricane Sandy and its aftermath led to the postponement of all high school sporting events last week, bringing to a halt league playoffs and the completion of the regular seasons.

"If you would have told me a couple of weeks ago my girls basketball and soccer teams wouldn't practice for a week I would have had a heart attack, but this puts it in perspective," Truman girls soccer and basketball coach John Burke said of the damage and lack of power in party of New York City."

His soccer squad, which includes five basketball players, could face a unique challenge as the postponement of the playoffs could cause the seasons to intersect should his sixth-seeded squad make a deep run. The Mustangs are scheduled to open the basketball season Nov. 11 against Benjamin Banneker. Burke has been running the first hour of basketball practice and then heads to soccer practice. Junior varsity hoops coach Raymond Penton runs the remainder of basketball practice.

"I'll literally be wearing two hats next week," said Burke, who lost power in his home in Smithtown, Long Island.

The player's fitness could be an issue after more that a week off from practice. Daylight savings time and field availability has also thrown a monkey wrench into the schedule plans. Soccer playoff games need to be scheduled earlier than regular season games on a field without lights to take in account the possibility of overtime and shoot out. Most schools would prefer students not missing any more class time to leave early for games.

Hurricane Sandy churnig up the Easr Coast

"Things would have to begin at 1:30," Riverdale girls soccer coach Orlando Osorio said. "That requires kids to miss a very significant about of school time. That's one of the main road blocks."

As of Sunday the PSAL and NYSAISAA suspended all games until further notice. The CHSAA Class AA boys soccer quarterfinals resumed Tuesday night and it's Class A postseason began on Thursday.

The CHSFL moved its first week of playoffs back to this weekend and according to Mount St. Michael coach Mario Valentini it will not have any effect on the traditional Bronx Thanksgiving Day football games between Mount St. Michael and Cardinal Hayes and Xavier taking on Fordham Prep. If any of the teams should reach the Class AA final the title game would be played the weekend after Thanksgiving week.

The coach added that communication with his players and colleagues was an issue in the days following the storm. Mount St. Michael had no power and the schools facility emails were down. All of that is secondary right now.

"It's going to be a little bit of a challenge to get back to normalcy," Valentini said. "More importantly its making sure everybody is safe."

Manhattan veteran sets sights on MAAC title

BY JOSEPH STASZEWSKI

Steve Masiello was an assistant coach at Manhattan College the last time it went to the NCAA tournament in 2004. In his second season as Jaspers head coach he believes he has a team that can compete for a MAAC title and get the program back to the big dance.

"I think they have a chance," he said. "The pieces are there. The sky is the limit for them."

There are plenty of reasons to be optimistic after a 21-win season and a third-place finish in conference a year ago. Manhattan returns its entire starting line up, including four players who garnered preseason All-MAAC selections. Senior guard George Beamon was named to the first team and juniors Michael Alvarado, Rhamel Brown and sophomore Emmy Andujar were on the third team.

Beamon led the MAAC in scoring last year averaging 19.0 points per game was one fourth in 3-point field goal percentage at 42.7 percent, earning him a second straight all-conference selection. Masiello called him an efficient player, who doesn't need a lot of shots to put up big numbers and a good rebounder for a guard. He forms a strong combination with point guard Alvarado, who played his high school ball at All Hollows.

"He's really become a well-rounded player who can effect that game in so many ways and dominate the game without scoring," the coach said for Beamon.

The 6-foot-7 Brown, last year's MAAC defensive player of the year anchors a strong frontcourt with Andujar. The former Transit Tech standout set a school record with 84 block shots last season. He did so while averaging 7.9 points and 4.9 rebounds per contest.

"He's become a very good player that we think can be one of the best shot blockers ad defensive players in the country," Masiello said.

The Jaspers lineup may be filled with a plethora of returning talent, but it is their newest addition that might have the biggest impact.

Warriors football highlights and results

BY THE CHIEF Flag Division

All flag football players from the following sponsoring teams played amazingly well this past weekend:

Dugout Sports Shawnees, Mister Softee Blackfeet, Parkview Sports Cherokee, Anthony's Flower Farm Sioux, Barino's Market Mohicans, and Pruzzo's Supermarket Apaches.

Chief Jerry Demers and Flag Commissioner Dennis Kandell thank all parents and coaches for their "low key" support of our little guys and remind you to cheer for all the players.

Mites Division

Twenty-four hours earlier the North Bronx Paint & Hardware Jets were handed their first defeat and were temporarily bumped out of first place. They came back the next day with fire in their eyes and determination and avenged the defeat by a dominating performance, winning 19-6. After holding the Schuyler Hill Funeral Home Giants on the opening drive, the Jets took over and drove the length of the field with runs by Eric Mitchell Gary Phillips III. Jaylen Lopez capped off the drive with a 20 yard touchdown run with a dive right up the middle. Gary Phillips III scored the extra point by taking a pitch left and cutting back to the middle for the conversion. Giants quickly answered and the Jets responded with a 30 yard quarterback keep sweep by Jayden Delgado down the right sideline to give the Jets the lead for good. Jets led 13-6 at the half. Early in the 4th quarter Kenneth Maxwell put the game away with a sparkling 30 yard touchdown down the right sideline. Anthony Bell played great on defense causing havoc all game and making several tackles. Gary Phillips III had a big game on defense recording 8 tackles. Jayden Delgado completed 3 passes on the day. Two to Jaylen Lopez and one to Brandon Muniz that was stopped at the 2 yard line right before the half. It was a great team effort for the Jets to reclaim their first place standings with two big games left to play.

In Saturday's tough loss to the Giants, the Jets defense let up their first score all season but played tough. With 2 minutes left in the 1st half Gary Phillips III took a sweep to the right from 10 yards out and scored what appeared to be the first score of the game but it was nullified by a holding penalty. Hard running by Jaylen Lopez, Gary Phillips III Eric Mitchell and Kenneth Maxwell continued throughout the game. Trailing 7-0 with 2 minutes left in the game, the Jets showed resiliency. Gary Phillips III took a pitch left down the sideline for a 45 yard gain to the Giants 20 yard line, where the drive eventually failed. It was a great game by both teams.

The Middletown Animal Chiefs game was a defensive battle, with the Chiefs winning 7-0. The Chiefs lone score came on a 75 yard td run by Peter Defabbia, who also had 5 tackles, including one that prevented touchdown. The defense was led by Aidan Hanley-Piri and Christian Hernandez with 6 tackles each. There were big tackles by Dylan Carrasquillo and Joseph Goonan, Ferdinand Cosom and Bryant Ellis.

Junior-Pee Wee Division

The Spartans and Steelers met at Rice Stadium on Saturday October 27, 2012. The Spartans came away with their second win of the season, with a final score of 13 to 6. The running attack was lead by Quarterback Tyrell Foster who ran extremely well yet again. On the first play of the game, Tyrell Foster scored on a 60 yard touchdown. The mighty Steelers answered right back with a touchdown of their own to even up the score.

Neither team allowed the other to find the end zone for the remainder of the half. In the 3rd quarter, after another spectacular run by Tyrell Foster for 38 yards, fullback Kevin Franceschini powered his way into the end zone from the 5 yard line. The extra point was obtained on a Quarterback Sneak and

Mr. Fosters' quick feet. The hardest run of the day was by Running Back Sebastian Rodriguez just before the half, breaking multiple tackles back to back, before being pushed out of bounds. Great job by the offensive line; they are Francisco Correa, Michael DeLosSantos, Shane Harris, Yari Hernandez, Giovanni Betances and Allen Camilo. Let's not forget the great blocks made on the outside by Wide Receiver David Cojocar. Coach Bill Harris found a way to place his defensive players perfectly at crucial times of the game to stop the running attack of the potent Steelers back field. This was largely in part to the outstanding plays at Corner by Mr. Foster and Mr. Rodriguez. Outstanding defensive plays by DE's Nicodemus Nonis and Vincent Agovino. The other Defensive players played their hearts out as well and were outstanding, including Shane Harris, Yari Hernandez, Michael Tyrell, Andres Diaz, Ryan Kucera, Juelz Yuret and Allen Camilo.

Strong Safety Justin Fernandez secured our victory by intercepting a pass that allowed us to take a knee and end the game with yet another win. Great Job DEFENSE!!!! Great Job OFFENSE!!!! Great Job SPARTANS!!!!!!

The Millers Tires Blue Devils retained their undefeated status with a 20-6 win against the Jimmy Ryan Ramblers. Brandon Lopez scored all three touchdowns, and two extra points included a carry by Nick Tulipano and a pass to Novell Jordan. Outstanding tackles were made by Eric Reyes, Victor Lugo, Nathaniel and Ethan Colon, and Matt Marquez. Great blocking was contributed by Nick Tulipano, Novell Jordan, and Juan Correa, which helped the scoring touchdowns. Jimmy McGaughan threw the pass for the extra point and recovered the ball back on a kickoff. Great team work by our offensive lineman Juan Mendez, Jack Morrissey and Leonardo Chevere.

Manhattan sets sights on MAAC title

Ashton Pankey, a Bronx native, transferred from Maryland. The 6-foot-10, 225-pound forward started 17 games for the Terapins last year. Masiello expects Pankey to add length and athleticism an already deep roster.

Pankey is one of eight players on the Manhattan roster from New York City or Long Island. Masiello noted that his squad is beginning to recruit well nationally as well, but being from White Plains, he understands how special it is to win close to home.

"Anytime you have the hometown kid playing well at home, doing great things I think it makes for a great story," Masiello said. "Our guys take great pride representing New York. We want to be known as the team of New York."

All-MAAC selection George Beamon hopes to led Manhattan to a conference title.

Urban League Football Classic returns to Yankee Stadium Nov. 17

After 25 years away from the Bronx, the New York Urban League's (NYUL) Football Classic returns to Yankee Stadium on November 17th to host a match-up between Hampton University and Morgan State University.

This homecoming marks the rekindling of a partnership between NYUL and the New York Yankees organization started by the late George Steinbrenner; a college football enthusiast and NYUL supporter.

The NYUL Football Classic has the proud distinction of being among the largest in the nation, a testimony to the legacy of what the game represents for attendees.

For many, the annual event connects the fun of football with education. Alumni groups, community based organizations, Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCU) students and families and NYUL supporters are expected to converge upon the stadium for a full afternoon of family festivities and football. In previous years, attendance has topped 40,000 fans.

While much has changed since this the early days of the Classic, the NYUL remains steadfast in its commitment to provide scholarships to college hopefuls through its Whitney M. Young Scholarship Fund. To date, NYUL has provided more than $20 million in scholarships to underserved New York City students who demonstrate strong potential for academic achievement.

This year's class of 22 scholars received scholarships toward their college expenses.

"The Football Classic is an incredible opportunity to help the next generation of young adults attend college. Providing access to quality education for all students is deeply engrained within the NYUL's mission," said Arva Rice, President and CEO of the NYUL. "With a successful history of celebrating the HBCU experience while raising funds to send New York City students to college, bringing back the Classic to the Bronx was long overdue. We have nothing but great expectations for this year's Classic."

The Yankees organization has continued their 20-year commitment with this year's game.

Other sponsors include Armitron, Bank of America, Benjamin Moore, Enterprise Rent-A-Car, Geico, Home Depot, MasterCard, McDonald's, Miller Coors, Municipal Credit Union, New Era, New York-Presbyterian Hospital, PepsiCo, Subway and UPS. The half-time performance will include a battle between Hampton University and Morgan State University marching bands. Renowned R&B singer Avant will perform the Black National Anthem, as well as his current hit "You & I." The full roster of performances and special guest appearances will be announced later this month.

Tickets can be purchased through Ticketmaster outlets and online at www.Ticketmaster.com.

Pipe Dreams: What did he say?

yelling at the TV set because of a questionable call FOR Dallas, he also yelped at the set. The Cowboys only had 19yds rushing but had 415 through the air, allowed 4 sacks, threw 4 INTs, and were guilty of several uncalled personal fouls. After one of these non-calls, the zebra walked after the Giant player lecturing HIM to not foul and was letting it go THIS time. Can you tell that I dislike the Cowboys?

Yeah Duffy, 415 passing yards allowed is atrocious and I'm also puzzled about how the Cowboys ran 3 plays in 10 seconds.

What Did He Say?

Norman Chad (DC Post) complained about the broadcasting people for NFL games and said, "Most football broadcasting can be divided into four simple categories: smart (10 percent), dumb (54 percent), spectacularly dumb (21 percent) or Tony Siragusa (2 percent). The rest (13 percent) is all cliched turnovers. "They're better than their record indicates." No, no, no, no, no, no — as Bill Parcells used to point out repeatedly, you are EXACTLY as your record indicates. Next. "... great hand-eye coordination." When you think about it, the key to most success in American history — Edison's invention of the light bulb, Burger King's creation of the Whopper, Warren Beatty's whirlwind courtship of Annette Bening — is the result of great hand-eye coordination.

What Would George Do?

Wallace Matthews (espnny.com) asked that question and went on to list cuts he felt that GMS would have made.

My thinking is that Mr. Steinbrenner would have moved quickly to correct the Yankees' problems without looks in a wallet, listened to Stick, and moved on to the winner's circle.

A GMS Wannabee

Greg Cote (Miami Herald) ranted about the way Jeffrey Lotia, the owner of the Marlins, but it's funny how some of what he wrote was familiar. "Loria is today searching for the eighth manager of his 11-year ownership and the fifth just since early 2010, a reckless, outlandish, embarrassing instability that is the hub of this club's dysfunction.

A baseball club with a meddlesome owner whose impatience conveys a lack of direction, and invites a lack of faith in his stewardship." It was amazing how much GMS seemed to have learned after he won those championships.

Pro Bowl

Dan Daly (DC Times) wrote about Pro Bowls from a previous era. "There was more bad blood when the NFL was smaller (i.e. 12 franchises for most of the '50s) because teams bumped into one another more often. At times, that enmity could spill over into the Pro Bowl (as it did after the 1964 season when Frank Ryan, quarterback of the champion Cleveland Browns, suffered a dislocated shoulder courtesy of Gino Marchetti, whose Baltimore Colts had lost the title game to the Browns).

National Fossil Day

RJ Currie (SportsDeke.com) wrote: "In a related story, Evander Holyfield announced he wants another title shot."

AFC Soccer highlights and results prior to Hurricane Sandy

BY THE SHADOW

Prior to "Sandy", The teans from AFC made their winds felt on Cintron Field. The highlights are as follows:

Porco Adjusting "out performed" Performance Edge, 2-1. Top adjusters were Domenick Munafo and Joseph Cala with a goal each. The standout on "D" was keeper Chris Schack.

ing in a tie was Isabella Carting and Patrick Wynne, Agttornies, 1-1. Scoring for Isabella was Danielle Brown with help from Nicolla Bulla, Sara Vukic, Antonio Torres, Lauren Colon, Jayleen Resto and Kayla Pagan. For Patrick Wynne it was Nicholas Tripoli with the lone score. Other stellar performances from Jessica Dinneen, Lakota Strain, Francesca Bhczowski, Landon Lynch and Amber Patiarca.

NY Yankees to donate $500,000 to Red Cross

The New York Yankees today announced they will donate $500,000 to the American Red Cross to support the relief efforts in the Tri-State area associated with Hurricane Sandy.

"The damage and destruction to the Tri-State area caused by Hurricane Sandy is daunting, but we have seen the great resiliency of this region before," said New York Yankees Managing General Partner Hal Steinbrenner. "As a neighbor and community member, the Yankees embrace our role of stepping forward and assisting the American Red Cross, which comes to the aid of so many people through their tireless efforts."

PLEASE READ IT CAREFULLY. SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME. IF YOU FAIL TO RESPOND TO THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT IN THIS FORECLOSURE ACTION, YOU MAY LOSE YOUR HOME. PLEASE READ THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT CAREFULLY. YOU SHOULD IMMEDIATELY CONTACT AN ATTORNEY OR YOUR LOCAL LEGAL AID OFFICE TO OBTAIN ADVICE ON HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF. SOURCES OF INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE The state encourages you to become informed about your options in foreclosure. In addition to seeking assistance from an attorney or legal aid office, there are government agencies and non-profit organizations that you may contact for information about possible options, including trying to work with your lender during this process. To locate an entity near you, you may call the toll-free helpline maintained by the New York State Banking Department at 1-877-BANK-NYS (1-877-226-5697) or visit the department's website at WWW.BANKING.STATE.NY.US. FORECLOSURE RESCUE SCAMS Be careful of people who approach you with offers to "save" your home. There are individuals who watch for notices of

foreclosure actions in order to unfairly profit from a homeowner's distress. You should be extremely careful about any such promises and any suggestions that you pay them a fee or sign over your deed. State law requires anyone offering such services for profit to enter into a contract which fully describes the services they will perform and fees they will charge, and which prohibits them from taking any money from you until they have completed all such promised services. § 1303 NOTICE NOTICE YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME If you do not respond to this summons and complaint by serving a copy of the answer on the attorney for the mortgage company who filed this foreclosure proceeding against you and filing the answer with the court, a default judgment may be entered and you can lose your home. Speak to an attorney or go to the court where your case is pending for further information on how to answer the summons and protect your property. Sending a payment to your mortgage company will not stop this foreclosure action. YOU MUST RESPOND BY SERVING A COPY OF THE ANSWER ON THE ATTORNEY FOR THE PLAINTIFF (MORTGAGE COMPANY) AND FILING THE ANSWER WITH THE COURT. DATED: October 11, 2012 Gross Polowy Orlans, LLC Attorney(s) for Plaintiff(s) 25 Northpointe Parkway, Suite 25 Amherst, NY 14228. As we approach Thanksgiving, those of us who are fortunate enough to live on high ground have much to be thankful for. We may not have all the public transportation in place, and some businesses may be closed, but we are warm and dry. We may not get gas easily, but our automobiles are intact. We may not have electric yet, but once the trees are cut up, that too will be restored. So this is the perfect time of the year to consider or fellow citizens here in New York. Many are without the basic services that we call "civilization." Porta-potties on the streets can not replace a clean bathroom with running water. My home may be dark, but I have a home to go home to! Many in the metropolitan area, and right here in the Bronx, have lost everything. We know it is hard to get around to donation centers and shelters. For this reason we have opened our doors to accept donation which will be distributed here in the Bronx to those damaged by the Harlem River flooding, those on City Island and those with coastal homes. We will be accepting warm clothing, bottles water, canned goods and especially personal hygiene items. Our office will be donating $ 25.00 to the Red Cross for each new patient who comes in for treatment. We will also be donating toothpaste and toothbrushes. In this, the season of Thanksgiving, let's do our part. Be thankful. Give generously.

Adult homes are bracing for exodus

BY DAVID CRUZ

Adult homes across the Bronx are bracing for an exodus of residents, many of them suffering from schizophrenia and depression.

Thanks to a new Albany rule, at least 75% of those living in adult homes will be farmed out by December, and into supportive housing units where is often scant, charged advocates.

Some of estimated 700 persons affected could wind up homeless or living among the general public, they say.

The change, enforced by the state Office of Mental Health, could also force closure of several state-funded adult homes.

The borough currently has five adult homes: Bronxwood, Amber Court of Pelham Gardens, New Fordham Arms Assisted Living, Parkview Home for Adults, and the Riverdale Manor Home for Adults, which houses the most mentally ill tenants within the borough.

The changes would greatly effect Bob Williamson, whose manic-depressive brother Ralph lives at Riverdale Manor. A military vet, Ralph has called Riverdale Manor home for the past 15 years, coping along thanks to familiar faces and a built-in routine.

But the new rule has brought a mountain of concern for Williamson, afraid the lack of round-the-clock service would endanger his brother and the community.

The new rule stems from the "integration mandate" of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The federal government sees adult homes as institutional settings that restrict the disabled, including those with mental illness.

State officials, according to the federal government, have to create a plan to move those from adult homes into supported apartments and other "community living alternatives".

Years ago, Disability Advocates Inc. filed suit in Brooklyn federal court making similar claims.

A judge ruled in DAI's favor, sending the case to the federal appeals court where it was overturned.

But the Office of Mental Health, staying on top of the federal change, agrees the rule is not mandatory but rather a choice for the families of those who house their mentally ill relatives into adult homes.

Senator Jeff Klein, who chaired the Assembly's Oversight Analysis and Investigation Committee in 2002 when it reviewed adult home conditions, disagrees with the federal ruling. "It's really going to force a lot of individuals who personally utilize adult homes to become homeless," Klein argued. "It's the only home they know."
